

Robert DOUBLEDAY

Robert Doubleday is a Senior Research Associate and Lecturer in Environmental Policy at the Department of Geography at the University of Cambridge. His research is concerned with the relationship between science, citizenship and the governance of emerging technologies. He is currently working on a Wellcome Trust project exploring the public dimensions of biomedical nanotechnologies. Prior to joining the Department of Geography, he was based in the University of Cambridge's Nanoscience Centre, where he worked collaboratively with nanoscientists to explore the social dimensions of their research.